Text based art.

Outsourcing.

In this project we had to outsource an artwork. We were to think of an idea and have another person who is skilled at a particular craft make that for us.

I went to a welder and got this sculpture made. I converted a children's drawing into a 3 dimensional piece.

Collection

Another assignment based project where we had to make a collection of anything. I chose to collect signatures. I went around and asked all the people that I interacted with to sign on a post-it chit.

Doodle drawings and sculptures.

For this next work I took my every day doodles (drawings that I had made when bored) and turned them into small wire Sculptures. I displayed them with my sketchbooks that had the doodles as references. These were all imaginative portraits.

Sketchbook line drawings

I started exploring lines and kept a sketchbook to draw my line drawings in. In it I doodled and experimented with many different designs and visuals

PHOTOMANIPULATION

Later on I digitally manipulated the drawings and played around with the visuals

PHOTOSERIES

Photographs taken of different sorts of paper. Played with the composition and lighting while photographing.

PHOTOSERIES

Photos taken of everyday random objects in such a way that they become abstract and lose its original identity creating a new visual.

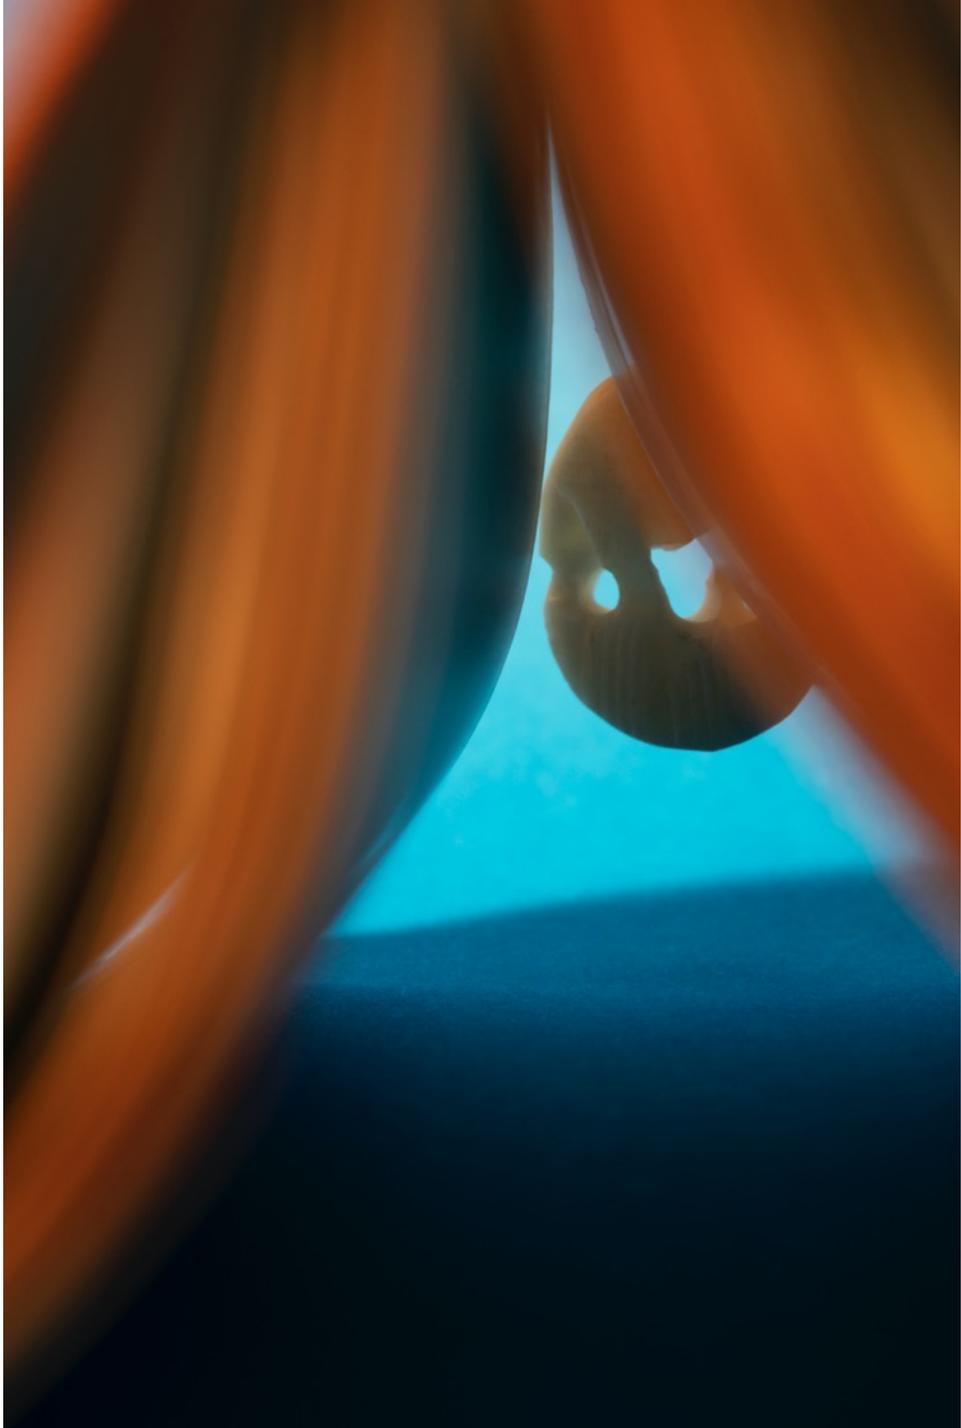

Acrylic paint sandwiched between layers of acrylic sheets.

I was inspired by rorschach images to create these series of paintings. The paint when sandwiched between layers formed its own shape and created a visual which can be interpreted by the viewer however they see it.

In the following slides I added both(front and back) sides of the painting as it can be seen from either side since it is transparent.

Line drawings

Further exploration with lines and doodles, I made larger scale line drawings. I wanted to see if the change in scale would alter the visual in anyway or maybe add a new layer to the work. This required much more concentration and effort than the sketchbook drawings.
