

Fasiha Umar
Ideal Human Figure
Black Pointer
18.05.20

Ideal Human Figure

Leonardo Da Vinci's Vitruvian Man from Renaissance time period is called the ideal/perfect human figure. It's the most famous illustration, the theory of a male figure who outstretched its upper and lower limbs to touch the edges of the square and the circumference of the circle and his navel is in the exact center of the circle. Well for them the Vitruvian Man is the ideal figure but in our society it's the Woman who manages all the household stuff. Their job is not just like any other jobs, it's probably the most important one. They are like the Director of operation. Their responsibilities and requirements are so extensive. Like Mobility that they have to work standing up most of the time, constantly on their feet, exerting high level of stamina. They have to work 135 hours a week, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week and there are no breaks for them. And sometimes they have to stay up throughout the night, they have no social life for themselves, no holidays and on events their workload just get double. But the feeling they get in return is immeasurable. And for all this they don't get charged they do this all for free. They are the true Ideal Human Figure.

#worldstoughestjob

