Draft no.1

For my final performance, I'll be doing a recorded performance; showing the motion of liquid while it's been poured into another liquid. This will show how my subconscious can take place while being conscious and moving around. I will let my unconscious mind to slowly take over my body just as the liquid; how it is lifeless and yet filled with motion. With these thoughts I recorded a video for myself where I am pouring liquid in into another liquid and the motion of it is captured.

After watching my attached video

In my performance, the song or any music in my head at that time will act as my hand (which was pouring ink as it was a support system for a liquid) and the motion released via body will be the ink, controlled by the subconscious which will be the situation – blind folded in a room.

The purpose of this performance is to slowly connect myself with my subconscious while being in motion. Just as I did for my first assignment while sitting in front of the camera with zero thoughts in my mind but this time I will be moving. I'll be recording 2 videos; one static and the other in motion just like myself. And at the end, playing both videos together, one will show the feeling of that motion while the other will show how space has been used and what provoked me to change the movement.

On a side note

In another video, I drew things on liquid just to a way to show what I see or how my brain processes with the imagery I look. You can also share your thoughts with me that what did you see when you simply look at the video of ink dropping. What kind of visuals were formed in your mind?
